Project Description

The State Department plays an important role in engaging on the environment, conservation, wildlife trafficking, science, innovation, and global health security internationally. These issues have significant impacts domestically and abroad.

The Virtual Student Foreign Service (VSFS) eIntern selected for this project will work with Public Diplomacy officers from the State Department's Bureau of Oceans and International Environmental and Scientific Affairs (OES) and will be responsible for filming on location, editing and producing short videos and social media clips for OES public events. The purpose of the videos/clips is to visually share the message and priorities of the OES and the State Department at large. The videos will also be used to develop a digital visual repository of media. OES will retain ownership of all material and will attribute to the eIntern. The videos would be free for anyone to use as long as attribution is given and not used for profit. The videos will be used on a variety of State Department social media platforms, reaching an audience of millions of people.
